Mrs. Dangel's Class

November 22nd, 2019

Dear Parents,

This week we discussed and learned about being grateful and thankful for social studies. We loved our RAMS time meeting where we made a list of things we are grateful for, did the gratitude dance and signed pink gratitude tokens to give to people we are grateful for. I know some kids took theirs home too! What a great lesson leading up to Thanksgiving!

In math we enjoyed sharing our spheres and cubes during shape sharing Thursday. There will be another sharing day on Tuesday next week where the kids can hunt for real objects that have a cone and cylinder. Be creative! Please have your child work on those math pages from the homework bag. We are having a hard time remembering the difference between the sphere (like a ball) and cylinder!

Next week is a short week full of learning about Thanksgiving, structure and function of design (our new science unit), and ending sounds in words. Please be sure your child is getting plenty of rest, eats a healthy protein for breakfast and is encouraged to be their best so all can learn! Thanks!

Mr. C has a Colossal Cap

Mr. C wants to ask your child what colossal means? He feels shy at times and covers himself completely with his cap but he's really trying to be less shy!

We learned that writing his letter correctly helps us start many other lowercase letters as well. We practiced reading and writing his letter in words and on our C puzzle. We did not have a C snack this week. Thank you for reading the more challenging Mr. C book from the homework bag.

Give Thanks
